On March 31, 2021, Governor Cuomo signed into law what is commonly known as the Humane Alternatives to Long-Term Solitary Confinement (HALT) Act (Chapter 93 of the Laws of 2021), which generally serves to restrict the use of segregated confinement in state and local correctional facilities, while creating alternative therapeutic and rehabilitative confinement options. The legislation places strict limitations on a local correctional facility’s use of segregated confinement, which is defined as the confinement of an incarcerated individual to a cell in excess of 17 hours per day, with limited exceptions. The segregated confinement of incarcerated individuals 21 years of age and younger, 55 years of age or older, disabled, or pregnant is generally prohibited. Otherwise, the segregated confinement of an individual is generally limited to 15 consecutive days, or 20 days in any 60-day period. Out-of-cell programming must generally be offered to individuals in segregated confinement at least 4 hours per day, and at least 6 hours per day for individuals confined in residential rehabilitation units (RRUs), utilized by large facilities for incarcerated individuals who have reached the time limitations of segregated confinement.

The New York State Commission of Correction (Commission) voted to adopt HALT Act-compliant regulations setting minimum standards for the imposition of segregated confinement and the operation of RRUs in jails. The regulations became effective March 31, 2022 to coincide with the effective date of the HALT Act.
Segregated Confinement

Definition: The confinement of an incarcerated individual in any form of cell confinement for more than seventeen hours a day other than in a facility-wide emergency or for the purpose of providing medical or mental health treatment. Cell confinement that is implemented due to medical or mental health treatment shall be within a clinical area in the correctional facility or in as close proximity to a medical or mental health unit as possible.

Facility Reporting: Local correctional facilities are required to maintain a website with monthly, semi-annual and annual cumulative reports, of the total number of people who are in segregated confinement. Additionally, by February 1st of each year, each local correctional facility is required to submit a report to the Commission detailing all aspects of segregated confinement occurring in the facility during the preceding calendar year. The results of the annual reporting of segregated confinement can be found below, with an overview of the total population in local correction facilities during the same time period.
Residential Rehabilitation Units

Definition: A separate housing unit used for therapy, treatment, and rehabilitative programming of incarcerated people who have been determined to require more than fifteen days of segregated confinement pursuant to department proceedings. Such units shall be therapeutic and trauma-informed, and aim to address individual treatment and rehabilitation needs and underlying causes of problematic behaviors.

Facility Reporting: Local correctional facilities that exceed 500 beds are required to maintain a website with monthly, semi-annual and annual cumulative reports of the total number of people who are in residential rehabilitation units. Additionally, by February 1st of each year, each local correctional facility that exceeds 500 beds is required to submit a report to the Commission detailing all aspects of residential rehabilitation units occurring in the facility during the preceding calendar year. The results of the annual reporting of RRU population can be found below, with an overview of the total population in local correction facilities during the same time period.

Recommendations to the Governor and Legislature

In 2022, the New York State Commission of Correction provided extensive technical assistance, performed thorough evaluations, and conducted several meetings with local correctional facilities. Throughout this process, a great deal of progress has been made and some concerns have been identified. This legislation contained widespread change to systematic ideologies and greatly impacted how correctional facilities deal with the discipline of incarcerated individuals. This report provides an overview of the Commission’s recommendations provided to local correctional facilities throughout the fiscal year and, as a result of these recommendations, significant progress has been made to meet compliance with these regulations.

In review of the past year, the Commission has assessed various data points, facility feedback and evaluation reports to provide a recommendation to the Governor and the Legislature. Below are the recommendations:

- Many local correctional facilities previously relied on volunteers and local school districts to provide programming and educational services. Despite an increased need for such services to comply with HALT Act requirements, these resources have been limited following the recent COVID-19 pandemic and ongoing workforce shortages. To assist local correctional facilities’ efforts in managing the incarcerated population, while meeting the requirements of the HALT Act, the Commission recommends that all legislative and budgetary options be considered to effectively expand the available programs available in local correctional facilities, particularly in upstate, rural counties with limited availability.

- As demonstrated in Appendices 1 and 2, county jails have experienced a significant increase in reported violent incidents compared to the prior year, while serving a decreased average daily population. With limited authority under the HALT Act to confine violent perpetrators to a cell, local correctional facility administrators have been challenged in safely segregating these individuals from the rest of its population. This is especially true in facilities having less than 200 beds, which account for the preponderance of county jails in the State, where the physical plant may not allow for the safe out-of-cell segregation of chronically violent individuals. Consequently, the Commission recommends that all available options be explored to mitigate this challenge.
